Problems of Recreation Vital need for recreational provision for the blind. Agencies in the field. Character of facilities provided. Case histories illustrating present inadequacy. Conclusion - Need for extension of existing facilities and for intensive personal service. VI. Institutional Problems Care and education of blind children. Care and shelter of aged blind. A. Unusual educational and institutional facilities available for blind children. Existing institutions. Question of a separate Jewish institution. Intensive survey revealed only a small group eligible. Number of blind children constantly decreasing. High standard of excellence of existing institutions not soon attainable by small, newly established institution. Present institutions eager to co-operate in providing religious education. Other difficulties also adjustable. Conclusion - Separate institution for blind Jewish children inadvisable; required elements for their care attainable by co-operation with existing agencies. B. Need for additional institutional facilities for the aged recognized. Special needs of aged blind not supplied. Available institutions for Jewish aged and number of inmates. Additional provision in process. Special shelters for aged blind objectionable. Necessity for adapting existing institutions to meet special needs of the blind advocated. Supplementary organized outside effort required. Conclusion - Extension of existing capacities of homes for the aged recommended, as well as provision of special facilities to meet the peculiar needs of blind inmates. VII. Problems of Begging Proportion of blind beggars. Case histories illustrating complexity of problems involved. Conclusion - Need for social program to provide for suitable employment, adequate relief, appropriate institutional care, proper recreational opportunities. VIII. General Conclusion Recommendation of a bureau for the Jewish blind to function as...
