The same disparity between the best and poorest work may be found in the other subjects. This is due to the fact that some of the critic teachers are most capable and possess teaching ability of the highest order, while some of them are highly incompetent. The work of the strongest teachers is equal to the best to be found anywhere. At least one fourth of them possess superior ability both as teachers and supervisors of students. On the other hand, at least one-third of the training school teachers gave evidence of little teaching power or skill in dealing with student teachers under their direction. The quality of teaching they do with the children would not be tolerated in well supervised graded schools. The general...
