One may even magnanimously neglect to point out that in some cases, for example, in the phylloxerans and probably the rotifers, the sex-determining event, as shown by differences in the size of the eggs, precedes the differential behavior of the chromosomes, and that the chromosomes are therefore not players, but pawns. It may be admitted that the experimental work of Baltzer, Gates, Lutz, Stomps, and others, has fixed upon the chromosomes the responsibility of producing certain hereditary features of the organisms they studied. Yet, after making all these admissions, it is possible to accept as demonstrated certain facts which plainly indicate an influence upon hereditary processes, of something else than chromosomes. It is my purpose first to point out a few of these facts; and second to show how we may cherish this evidence, without spewing the chromosomes out of our mouths, like the angel of Laodicea, and likewise without straddling. Among the foremost evidence of the importance of cytoplasm in heredity is that derived from cases of inheritance only through the mother. Inheritance only through the mother is in strong contrast to one of the earliest evidences in favor of the nucleus as the bearer of hereditary factors. It was long ago pointed out that father and mother shared equally in fixing the nature of the offspring; but that the spermatozoa carried little or...
