The front is composed of eight Corinthian pillars, with an ample and well proportioned triangular pediment; and within these eight pillars, at the distance of about six feet, are four others, like the former; and two pillars of three faces each, that terminate the walls of the temple which extend considerably beyond the body of the temple itself. All these form a portico before the door of the temple, in depth about twenty-four feet, and Upwards of sixty in breadth; Through these pillars appears the door of the temple, and that to the utmost advantage; the nice propor-. tions of the pillars, their distance from each other, and the recess of the door itself, all contributing td make it look majestic. The door-case or portal re- sembles in its proportion and construction tia great marble portal at the West end of St. Pauls but fax exceeds it in the richness of its sculpture. Tlie whole height of it is about forty feet, and its width. about twenty-eight, with an opening twenty feet wide. An soon as...
